THOUGHTS FROM OUR FRIEND

Dear Reader

I hope this last offering finds you cooler than of late!

Well here we are then, gathering ourselves for the last part of the summer and revelling in this cooler weather that we've been having. Suddenly it's pleasant and the rain that we've had has made it feel a bit more normal. In this neck of the woods, we're used to preparing for every bit of weather that's thrown at us, it has been known over the years, that we've experienced every season over a couple of days...in 'Flaming June' So we can deal with the rain and the wind, but this heat has been something else hasn't it?

The last couple of months has been difficult for a lot of people, not least the farmers trying to keep crops watered, the fires that we've had with a risk of so much damage. It feels that although we've enjoyed the sun, it hasn't come without its problems.

On the plus side, people have helped each other and in some cases prevented serious damage from fire.

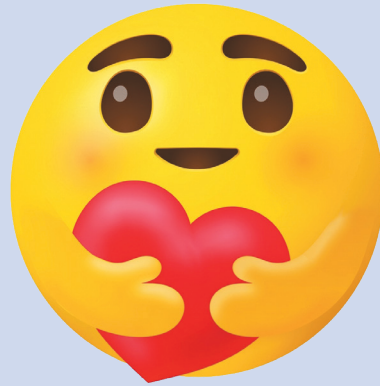

It's not just about us locally though, it's about what is happening to the planet, the vast majority of us know to save water, not take risks with fires and try to minimise our footprint, but it makes you think about being able to do even better as individuals.

It worries me to think about the world we leave behind. I know many of the local communities are working hard to ensure that our spaces are safe from large corporations that want to drain the life force out of the environment, particularly in Foxholes.

We all need to take responsibility in safeguarding our future.

I've thoroughly enjoyed writing this little bit for the magazine and I hope that in future we are able to reinstate it. Sarah and her team have done a sterling job, sourcing information, promoting the magazine and looking for sponsorship. I truly take my hat off to you.

Hoping that you have all enjoyed your summer and look forward to the autumn, wishing you well and remember to look out for each other and choose kindness.

A QUICK MESSAGE FROM US

Well folks, this will be the final edition produced by James and myself. As many of you know, we've been balancing our business alongside the newsletter for quite some time, and the workload has simply become too much to manage sustainably.

I'm not sure many people realise just how much time and effort goes into producing this magazine. A significant amount of work has been spent seeking sponsors and advertising, following up with contributors, and gathering the content needed each month. In truth, the level of engagement has been far lower than we expected for a community of this size.

We regularly encourage readers to submit cover photos and articles, yet we receive very little beyond the contributions of our long standing supporters. As a result, we've had to invest far more time than should be necessary to keep the newsletter meaningful - and that time is increasingly encroaching on the needs of our business, especially in such a challenging period for the industry.

This has always been a not for profit project, and with funds now fully depleted, we feel this is the right moment to step back and bid farewell.

To the fantastic people who have supported us throughout this journey, please accept our sincerest thanks. Your encouragement and contributions have kept the newsletter afloat far longer than it otherwise would have been, and we are truly grateful.

Our heartfelt thanks also go to the lovely people who distributed the newsletter and to those who kindly sent donations.

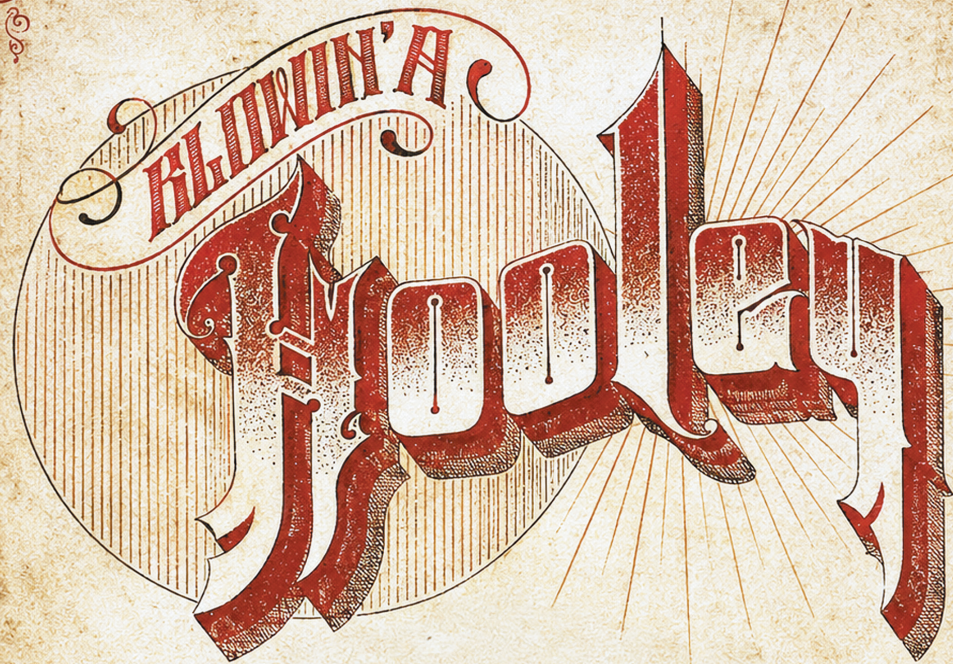

Special thanks to the people who really got behind the newsletter:

Autumn colour in the garden.

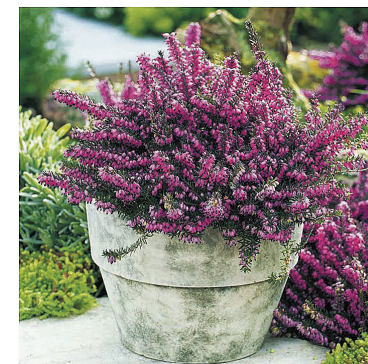

I hope you have all been enjoying the fabulous weather this summer, even if it has been hard to keep the garden watered! As we move towards the back end of the year, we can start to think about colour in the garden for Autumn & you can still plant a variety of plants now for that. Consider areas of your garden that become bare or uninteresting in Autumn & Winter, look at walls, fences or trellis as well as containers.

You could fill your garden with ornaments, happy, happy, happy gnomes (or gargoyles may be your thing...?), sculptures or structures for focal points which provide interest at any time of year. These things are static, but some plants can give long term interest, from bud to flower to fruit.

For shrubs with flowers into late season try varieties of Hebe, Abelia, Hydrangea, Potentilla, Hypericum, Fuchsia or Calluna.

As we progress to November & December, add Erica darleyensis, Viburnum species, Jasminum nudiflorum, Hamamelis mollis or Mahonia varieties.

Some additional colour can come from perennials, such as Anemone japonica, Phlox paniculata, Schizostylis coccinea, Sedum spectabile, Echinacea purpurea, Liriope muscari, Aster nova-belgii, Saxifraga fortunei or Cimicifuga foetida.

For climbing plants there are lots that give interest all year round, such as Ivy, which includes many species & varieties, with a variety of leaf shapes & colourings. For deciduous (lose their leaves) climbers, Parthenocissus henryana or P. tricuspidata give a fantastic autumnal display of red tinged leaves, as does the vine Vitis cognata.

Always, of course, there's my faithful friend Fatsia japonica, happy & shiny all year round!

STONE SOUP

Long ago, in the shadow of the craggy Qinling Mountains, sat a village where trust had dried up faster than the autumn river. A brutal drought had cracked the earth into jagged lines, and fear withered the hearts of the people. Terrified of starvation, families locked their heavy wooden doors. They hoarded their final meagre scraps of food in secret cellars. Everyone was quietly taking from their own dwindling reserves, but no one dared to share. The village was slowly dying.

One dusty afternoon, a traveller walked into the barren village square. Feeling the heavy silence and the hostile stares from behind shuttered windows, he set down a heavy iron pot, filled it with water from the nearby river and lit a crackling fire beneath it. Then, with great ceremony, he dropped a single, smooth river stone into the bubbling water and began to stir.

With curiosity growing inside her like the corn of better summers gone by, an old woman crept outside, her eyes affixed on the steam rising from the pot.

The traveller tasted the water and sighed loudly. "Ah, stone soup! Truly delicious, but a little cabbage would make it fit for an emperor."

Driven by a craving for something tasty, the woman paused for a moment and then hurried home. She soon returned with a withered cabbage she had hidden under her floorboards. "Will this do?" she asked.

"Perfect!" the traveller cheered. "But a pinch of ginger and some dried mushrooms would make it truly divine."

Seeing her contribute, a neighbour ran to fetch his hidden ginger. Then another brought mushrooms. "This is wonderful," chimed the traveller, "but noodles would make this a banquet."

Another neighbour brought dried noodles. Carrots, salt, and wild herbs soon poured into the square.

That evening, the square filled with laughter and the rich aroma of a massive feast. The villagers sat side-by-side, eating their fill. As the traveller quietly packed his pot, the village elder thanked him for feeding them.

The traveller smiled, pressing the stone from the pot firmly into the hand of the elder. "I did not feed you," he said. "You fed each other. A community is like this pot – it only provides if you choose to put something in."

THE RECIPE BOOK

CHEESE AND GARLIC STUFFED CHICKEN

Ingredients: (Serves 6)

For the stuffed chicken:
6 boneless chicken breasts, with the skin on
Butter, melted for brushing

For the stuffing:

30g (1oz) butter
1 onion, finely chopped
2 large garlic cloves, crushed
250g (8 oz) full fat soft cheese
1 tbsp chopped fresh tarragon
1 egg yolk
a pinch of grated nutmeg
salt and black pepper

Essential kit:

Sauce pan, oven proof dish

Method:

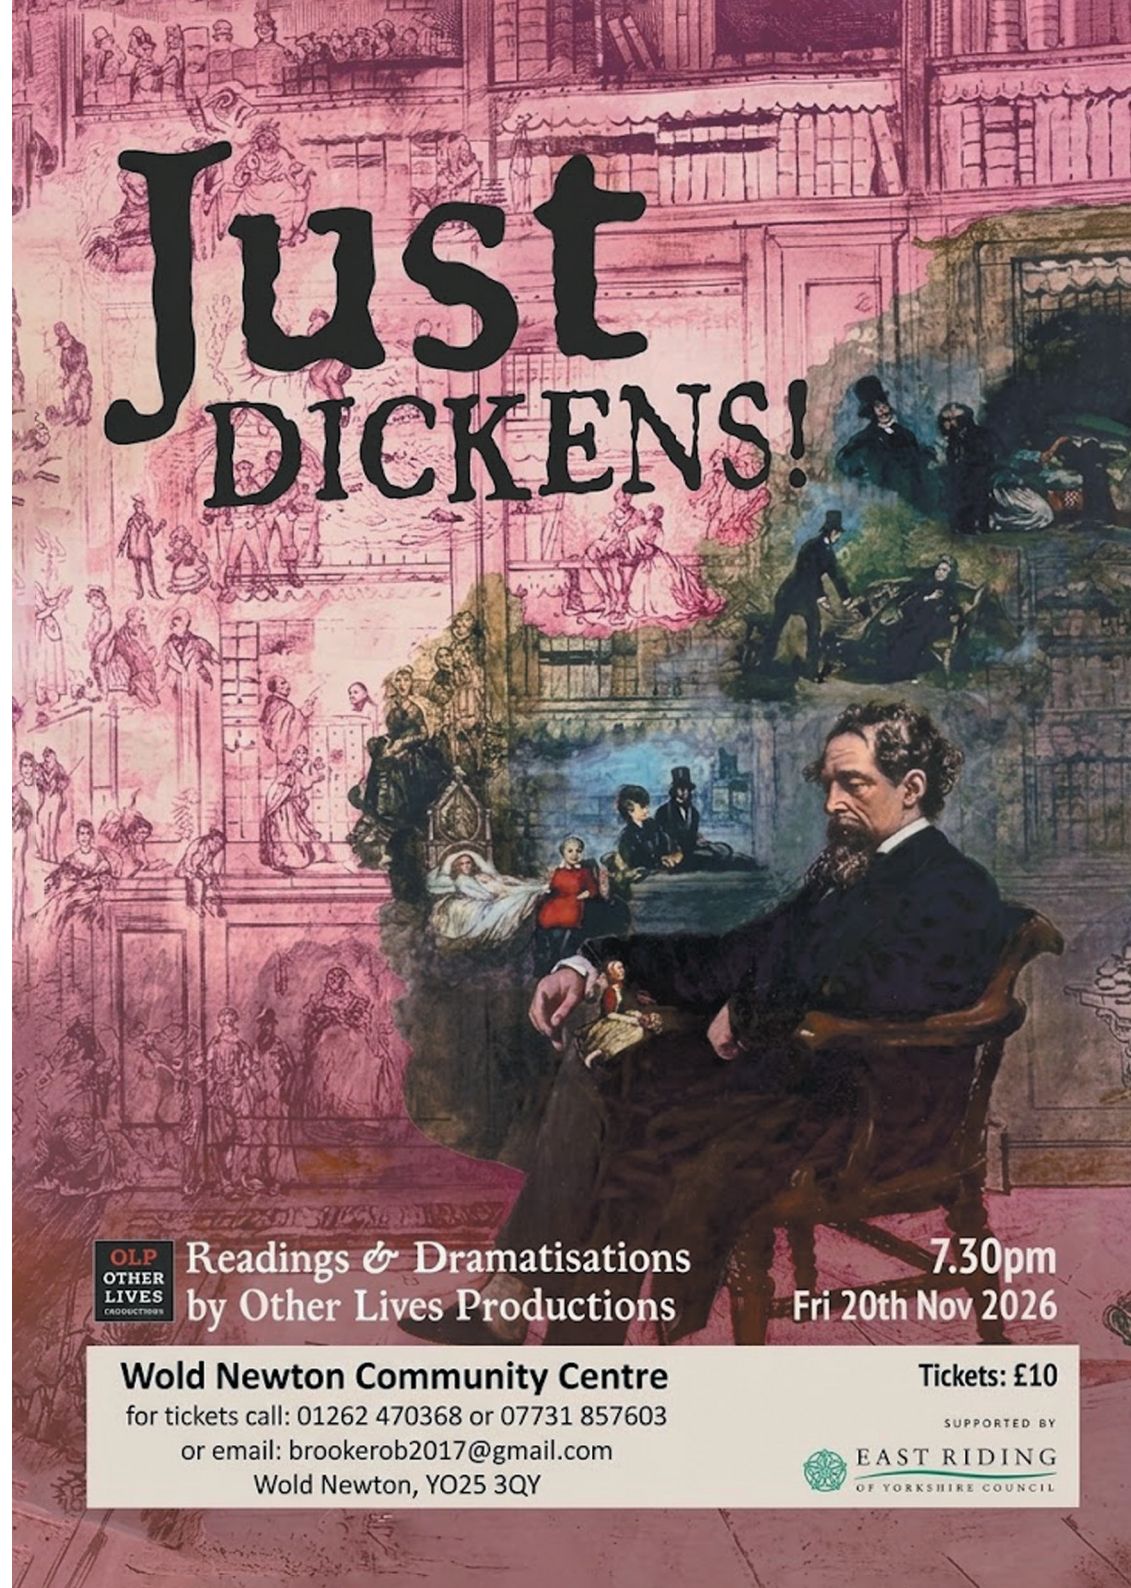

Make the stuffing: melt the butter in a small saucepan. Add the onion and garlic and cook gently, stirring occasionally, for a few minutes until soft but not coloured. Turn the onion mixture into a bowl, and leave to cool slightly.

Add the soft cheese to the onion mixture with the tarragon, egg yolk, and nutmeg. Season with salt and pepper and mix well.

Stuff the chicken breasts: lift up the skin along one side of each breast, spread the cheese mixture over the chicken and then gently press the skin back on top. Put the chicken breast into an ovenproof dish and brush with the melted butter.

Roast the chicken in a preheated oven at 190 °C (170 °C fan, Gas 5) for 25-30 minutes until the chicken is cooked through. Cut each breast into diagonal slices, and serve hot.
